The above quote by the venerable sports historian Richard Cashman accurately sums up opinion and knowledge of Australia's sporting relationship with Asia in the period before the Pacific War. It is the assertion of this study, however, that 'relatively rare' is an inaccurate descriptor that simply represents sport history's ignorance of the range and number of Australian-Asian sporting

Sport in the 1920 s was just as prominent as it is now. Australia s population not only followed professional sport, but played lots of sport themselves. Australians believed everyone should get a fair go, and this simple but just motto, still applies even today. Cricket, soccer and AFL were Australia s favourite sports. Cricket, was one of the sports we were really good at. Australians
