Air pollution and economic development Air Pollution

Benefits of improved technology to reduce air pollution have been quantified in many cases. Economic models show that with the introduction of additional measures some sectors will lose jobs (e.g. the fossil fuel sector); but that other sectors will gain jobs (e.g. the building and equipment sectors). In the long run environmental policy will favour the economy as it stimulates more efficient

Air pollution European Environment Agency

Air pollution harms human health and the environment. In Europe, emissions of many air pollutants have decreased substantially over the past decades, resulting in improved air quality across the region. However, air pollutant concentrations are still too high, and air quality problems persist. A significant proportion of Europe's population live in areas, especially cities, where exceedances of air quality standards occur.
